SGT University recently held its Environmental Fest-2025, featuring Dr. Rajendra Singh – the legendary “Water Man of India” and Ramon Magsaysay Awardee. As the chief guest, Dr. Singh inspired students and faculty alike with his powerful message on water conservation, making the event a landmark moment in the university’s mission to champion environmental awareness and sustainable living.

Dr. Rajendra Singh addressing a rapt audience at SGT Universitys “Environmental Fest 2025

In his inspiring address, Dr. Singh highlighted how environmental conservation becomes truly effective when scientific knowledge is combined with sensitivity and compassion. Sharing insights from his extensive experience, he emphasised the importance of blending formal education with indigenous knowledge systems to create meaningful environmental solutions.

Dr. Singh praised SGT Universitys newly launched M.Sc. in Environmental Sustainability program, calling it a forward-thinking initiative that connects future generations with nature along with a deeper understanding of environmental issues and a sense of responsibility toward protecting our planet. The program will definitely enhance the employability skills of aspirants.

The festival featured several engaging competitions, including quizzes, a “Battle of Ideas” debate, digital reel-making contests, and poster presentations. Students participated enthusiastically across departments, with Dr. Singh personally presenting awards to the winners and encouraging all participants.

Before concluding his visit, Dr. Singh toured the university campus and met with senior university officials, appreciating the university's several other environmental initiatives.

This successful event reinforces SGT University's commitment to environmental education and sustainability, helping inspire the next generation of environmentally conscious leaders.
